THE SECOND BULLET

By ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD

THIS STARTS THE STORY

A dinner party is being held at the nome of Colonel and Mrs. Ledyard. It is attended by their daughter, Beatrice; her friend, Bebe Cowles; Jornelius Swarthmore, Wendle Braddeck and Mrs. Hartshorne. Mrs. doek and Mrs. Hartshorne. Mrs. Jiattshorne's past history is clothed in mystery. Under the pretense of a severe headachs she suddenly leaves after a discussion relating to Zenas Prall, the former president of a bank, who was sent to prison for conversion of the bank's funds. A few days later, following a dance at Mr. Ledyard's, she is found dead in her home. Braddack and Swarthmore, who had been in love with her and were rivals, are exonerated by the authorities. Beautice Ledyard also denies responsibility for the crime but admits that the woman was murdered in her mother's home and that she had her servants remove the body in the middle of the night to the woman's own home. Swarthmore is arrested by the federal authorities after confessing to having defrauded the government in the matter of war contracts. Paul Harvey, a detective, takes a room at the house of Mrs. McNab, Prall's former house-keeper, in Riverton, the town where of Mrs. McNab, Frail's former nonse-keeper, in Riverton, the town where Prail wrecked his bank.
